Inmates stay busy with art at Central MS prison

PEARL – A creative explosion, to say the least, was briefly captured during the Art Show at the Central Mississippi Correctional Facility last week.

More than 14 artists were featured, showcasing their skills with paints, charcoal, oils, and colored pencils, and sharing life-changing moments, struggles, and future plans, all in the strokes of their hands.

The participants had a small-time frame to complete up to three projects in a category of their choice, and they did not disappoint. Their work was judged for creativity, originality, skill, format, and technique.

The Art Department hosted the event.
